THE BUTTERYS OF TEXAS

The stories I am about to tell are, as I remember them, as told to me in my boyhood. Therefore, I will not vouch for their accuracy as your memory often plays tricks with you, but in the essential facts they are true. In my childhood, Father usually went to church on Sunday night and we children remained home with Mother. It was on those Sunday nights that we would beg Mother to tell us Indian stories of frontier days and their happenings, and we would ply her with questions about early life in Llano county and the activities of our forefathers.

Our grandfather Buttery was born at Tunnel End in Yorkshire, England, grew into manhood, and was educated at Oxford University as a civil engineer. He prospered, married, and started rearing a family. When he was near middle age, he ran into financial difficulties and decided that his chance of recuperating his fortune was slim. In line of the thinking of that day, he decided to emigrate. Grandfather and one brother came to Texas, one brother went to Pennsylvania; two went to Australia.

Grandfather had a chance to work his way over on a cargo ship, so he made arrangements for his family to come over on another sailing ship. Grandmother's ship was delayed in sailing and it came by way of Spain and Cuba, then to Galveston, Texas. The trip consumed about four months and during the voyage my father's (H. E. Buttery's) twin brother died and was buried at sea. Due to the delay of the ship, Grandmother expected Grandfather to be waiting for her when they arrived at Galveston, but when her ship docked, no one was there to meet her. Grandfather's ship had come by way of New Orleans, and was several weeks late in getting to Galveston. Grandfather started looking for Grandmother and while passing a restaurant, he recognized Grandmother by her paisley shawl.

Only a few short years had passed since Texas had gained its independence and Austin had been selected as the site for the Capitol. So, Grandfather moved his family from Galveston to Austin in an ox wagon. He bought a small farm on the Colorado River about the present site of Lake Austin, built a log cabin, and set about to making a living for his family. During his stay in Austin, Grandfather was joined by his brother and family. Cattle raising was the chief occupation in Texas at that time, so Grandfather decided to enter the cattle business. He sold his holdings and moved to Honey Creek in Llano county in order to secure free range for his herd. Here his family grew, some to be nearly grown, when the Civil War blazed into action. Just a year or two before the war started, Grandfather

Butterfield

Grandfather moved to Llano, and built a cabin on the north side of Llano near a creek, which is named Buttery Hollow.

At the outbreak of the Civil War, Henry C. Buttery I and his brother-in-law, Miles Barler, joined a company of Llano and Mason county men. This company was mustered into the Confederate Army. Miles Barler had married Aunt Jane Buttery just a few years before the outbreak of the war, and his going to the army made a readjustment in the life of the Buttery family a necessity. When the war was over, Father and his brother-in-law, Miles Barler returned to Llano, and shortly afterward Father married Mississippi Ann Bedford. The Bedfords had come to North America about the time of the Revolutionary War, had settled in New York for a few years, had moved to Virginia for a generation, then to North Carolina, then Tennessee, and finally to the delta of the Mississippi to settle close to Natchez. Mother's Uncle George Bedford was sent East, and educated in medicine, as an economic measure in caring for the family slaves on the plantation, but Uncle George did not enjoy this work with the Negroes. He told his older brother that he preferred to work with horses because horses smelled better than Negroes. Therefore, he persuaded a maiden sister, Nellie Bedford, to move to Texas with him to raise racing horses. It was a custom of Southern gentlemen to raise thoroughbred horses for the yearly races. Hence, the Bedfords spent quite a bit of time and money producing good racing stock.

In the 1840's, Dr. George Bedford and his sister, Nellie Bedford, went to Llano, bought a small tract of land on Flag Creek, built a log home, and started raising fine horses. Uncle George was the only doctor for miles around, and it proved impossible for him to quit the practice of medicine, as people plainly demanded his services. Often he would be gone for as much as a week at a time as he did his practicing on horse-back. The compensations for his services were usually paid in produce of the ranches.

In the year of 1851, James F. Bedford decided to bring his family on a visit to his brother and sister at Llano. On the way he contracted a cold, developed pneumonia, and died at Bastrop, Texas. His family went to the Reliegh Mountain to see some cousins, the Rilay who lived in the lower part of Llano county. A few weeks after Grandfather Bedford's death, Grandmother died from peritonitis following the birth of a daughter, Mississippi Ann Bedford. Grandmother was buried in Honey Creek vicinity. This left a large group of orphan children, and Aunt Nellie took Mother and her sister, Ellen, to raise. To compensate Aunt Nellie for rearing Mother, the older Bedford brothers in Mississippi sent slaves, Phil and wife, to be Mother's personal slaves.

One summer when Mother was about five, her brother Jay came to visit them. Mother had a pet pig, which had grown into a big, fat shoat. Uncle Jay conceived the idea that the hog would make a good pony for Mother to ride; he rigged up a saddle and bridle and put Mother aboard. The hog became incensed at the treatment and ran off with Mother through a prickly pear patch. This episode ended with Uncle Jay getting a whipping, Mother having the pear briars pulled out of her, the pig in the smoke house as sausage. In telling the story, Mother still seemed to regret the loss of her pet pig.

Each year as the horses became two years old, the most promising ones were chosen and Uncle George and Aunt Nellie would take them back to the plantation in Mississippi. The home on Flag Creek was a two-room log cabin with a lean-to on the back. So, Mother would tell us stories of the fine homes of the family on the Mississippi Delta, of the Negroes' cabins and nightly singing of the slaves, of the tall cotton, and of the gay life of the big plantation.

Then came the holocaust of the Civil War. Life became very difficult, food other than meat became very scarce, and clothes became almost impossible to secure. Uncle Jay was too young for the army so he came to live with the Llano family. Aunt Nellie had a spinning wheel, but no loom, so she kept expressing a desire for a loom and made rough sketches as she remembered those they had used on the plantation in her childhood. Uncle Jay studied the sketches and decided he could build a loom. He cut down a wild cherry tree, sawed it into lumber with a hand saw, and, under Aunt Nellie's supervision, built the loom. This provided a way for people around Llano to have cotton produced at home, spun into thread on their own spinning wheels, and made into cloth.

After the war was over, the loom occupied too much room in the home, so Mother prevailed on Father to have it converted into a clothes press to hold the family bed clothing. During its construction, a neighbor stopped Franklin on the way to town and inquired as to what Father was having made. According to Mrs. Haynie's indignant report to Mother, Franklin's reply to the question was, "Well, now Mrs. Haynie, you see Father has so much money that he is having a box built to hold it." Afterwards, Mrs. Haynie was very careful in quizzing Franklin about our family business.

With the end of the Civil War, Aunt Nellie called Mother's slaves and told them that they were free. When it was explained to them what freedom meant, they wanted to know if they could take Miss Ann, my mother, with them. Aunt Nellie told them, "No, Miss Ann does not belong to you; you did belong to Miss Ann, but now you are free."

Old Phil promptly answered, "If Miss Ann ain't gwine, I ain't gwine either." So Phil spent the remainder of his life in my father's home, except for the last few days of his life. He made a trip to Austin, and on the return trip on a freight wagon, he fell off and was crushed to death.

When Mother was about eighteen, she married Father and they went to Honey Creek to live. Here Father built two log cabins. One was for Mother and himself and one for Mother's Negroes. So often in pioneer days, the Indians would wait for white people to come to the creek or river for water, and when they were bent over to fill their bucket, the Indians would murder and scalp them. This fact worried my father so he went up the side of the mountain to a spring, cleaned it out, and brought the water down the hill to his back door. Thus, Mother was the first woman in Llano county to have running water. Franklin was born while they were living at Honey Creek.

After living at Honey Creek for two years, it became necessary for Father and Mother to move to Llano. Uncle George had moved a bunch of fine horses back East and when the time for his return came, he did not show up. What happened to him is still unknown, but we presume he met foul play and was murdered either for his money or his horses. Nothing was ever heard of him or the cowboys that were with him. This made it necessary for Aunt Nellie to have company. Father enlarged the house and Mother took care of Aunt Nellie the remainder of her life.

During the time that Father and Mother lived on Honey Creek, Father's former captain in the Confederate Army, came to him for refuge from the Federal forces that were persecuting Confederate officers. Father hid him in a cave and when no one was around, he ate with the family. To while away his time, Father gave him a saw, chisel, and hammer, and from trees he cut down he made furniture for Father's home.

During the Civil War, Father's company was captured in the Vicksburg Campaign, was sent to New Orleans, and was a captive till the end of the war. After their release, Father came back to Llano. Father ranched and ran the hardware store. Uncle George ranched and farmed the rest of his life. Uncle Heslop lived on a farm next to Uncle George, Aunt Margaret married Mr. Seth Bailey, and Aunt Eliza married Mr. Moore and moved to the state of Oregon.

Buttery

MILES BARLER

This is the story of Miles Barler as related by my mother and Uncle Miles himself. L. L. Buttery

* * * * *

Miles Barler was a man of few words, but of strong convictions. He was a hard worker, scrupulously honest, an active citizen, an expert marksman, a strong prohibitionist, a devout Christian, a true friend, and a feared enemy. He was a man that his friends could count on in a pinch, and he was always willing to let everyone know where he stood on any question that pertained to his community, state, or nation.

One day in the 1850's, a wagon train stopped near the Barler farm in Illinois and camped for the night. Miles Barler, a teen-aged boy, drifted down from the farm to see the wagon train and visit with the home-steaders. It was here that he heard the glowing accounts of wonderful Texas. They told of the wonderful opportunities of free land, and of the wild game and fish to be had for the taking, in Texas.

The next morning when the wagon train moved out, he was with it. He had simply gone home, secured his rifle, and left home without telling his family where he was going. He was off for a lark that consumed a lifetime. The leader of the colonists was a Mr. John Oatman. After a long trip they reached what is now Llano, Texas, and here began the process of making a living. Here Miles Barler grew into young manhood and married Jane Buttery. In his memoirs, Barler tells of sitting on his father-in-law's front porch in north Llano and killing deer for the family table.

In 1860 the Civil War broke in all its fury, and Miles Barler joined a volunteer infantry company that was being organized in Llano county. At the battle of Vicksburg, Barler was captured by the Federal army, but he was hard to hold. The Federal forces placed Barler with other captives on a boat to be taken to St. Louis to prison. The steam boat was a wood-burner, and ever so often it stopped to take on wood to fuel the boilers. Watching the procedure, Barler began trading off his Confederate uniform, one piece at a time, for odds and ends of clothing. In this manner, he acquired the nondescript clothing used by the wood carriers. Finally the time came, and he went ashore with the wood carriers. As it was late in the evening, he simply melted into the wood and his leaving was not discovered till roll call the next morning, and by that time the steamer was miles up the river.

As he worked his way south the next day, he came to the Union lines, and, in Indian fashion, he approached their lines. He had come to the realization that a gun was a necessity if he wished to survive. He observed from a distance a Negro soldier walking his post, and that he passed a large tree as he walked to and fro. Barler secured a good club and slipped through the underbrush to the big tree he had observed. As the Negro soldier passed the tree, Barler knocked him in the head, took his gun, ammunition, and knife, and faded back into the forest. Here his knowledge of woodcraft came into good use. He was able to secure wild food, keep from being re-captured, and travel south till he could enter the Confederate lines and eventually his own regiment.

However, the course of the war was going more and more against the Confederacy and it befell Barler's lot to be again captured by the Union Army. In the latter part of the war, New Orleans had fallen to the Union Army, and it was concentrating the captured Confederate soldiers there.

In the campaigns around the Mississippi, Barler had contracted malaria, and he realized that if he were confined to a prison, he would probably never see Llano again. He decided escape was his only hope, so at dusk he went overboard just on the outside of the paddle wheels on the back of the boat. He was lucky in catching a piece of driftwood, and after swimming and drifting, he finally reached shore. He said he was so exhausted that all he could do was to pull himself up on the bank and go to sleep. He realized that, in his condition, he was worthless as a soldier, and so he returned by easy stages to Llano and home to recuperate.

He stayed around home for a few months, regaining some of his strength, but public pressure made him realize that he must do something in helping the fortune of the Confederacy. Realizing that his health would not permit him to do the work of a line soldier, he joined a guerilla band that was harassing the Federal lines in Texas.

Soon after joining the guerilla band, the war was over, and along with other men, he returned home to rebuild the devastated country. After their return, three factors came to plague the people. The first was the coming of the carpet baggers. They came to Llano with a calvary troop and took over the county government. Soon the men who had been in the Confederate Army called a secret meeting and organized the Ku Klux Klan. After deliberating on the invasion of the carpet baggers, they decided to show no signs of resistance to the transfer of authority from the elected officers to the carpet baggers in control. A few nights after the troops left, the KKK had a meeting and had their agents to pick up the carpet baggers and their belongings. The scene was then changed to over the Dead Man's Hole on the Colorado River. The carpet baggers were tried and convicted of stealing county funds, which they had spent. Not being duly elected officers of the county, they were convicted, promptly hung and, with their belongings, dumped into Dead Man's Hole, which had no known bottom.

A short time after this, the troops returned and inquired about the carpet baggers; the only information available was that they had taken their belongings and left the county. This episode was repeated three times, and then Llano county was left to its own resources.

But quiet was not to be the lot of Llano county. Comanche and Apache Indians began to raid the county, stealing horses and killing the settlers. Along about this time, Miles Barler bought himself a fine horse of Arabian stock. He was very proud of the animal, so he rode down to Honey Creek to show the horse to Father and Mother. He arrived at the cove late in the evening, and after exhibiting the horse, he fed and watered him, and with a trace chain, staked the horse to a pecan tree near the house, fearing that Indians might steal the horse during the night. The next morning, Barler found that the Indians had tried to steal the horse but, unable to cut the chain, they had cut the throat of the horse. Barler was infuriated. He wanted Henry Buttery to go with him, trail the Indians, and kill them if they could. This Henry Buttery would not do, as this was a cedar brake county and the Indians had the advantage both in number and woodcraft. But Barler would not be placated. He borrowed a horse, saddled him, and took after the Indians. He was gone all day and returned at dusk with the trappings of two Indians that he had killed. This incident occurred a short time before the Moss Brothers' Indian fight on Pack Saddle Mountain.

A few months later, the Buttery brothers and their cowboys were gathering cattle on Honey Creek. Miles Barler had come down from Llano to cut out his branded cattle from the herd that they were gathering. One day during this round-up, they had a brush with a bunch of Comanche Indians but did not suffer any loss; however, they did kill one Indian. That evening Miles Barler approached the group of cattlemen, wanted them to stay with the dead Indian, and wait till the other Indians tried to retrieve the body. The group refused to do this, as it was too dangerous, just for the chance that they might be able to shoot some more Indians. However, Barler stayed out all night and came in at breakfast time very much peeved that he did not get a single shot. Over a period of years, Barler was in several Indian fights, and he had collected a bunch of trophies. As a boy, I would go to see the collection and admire it.

During the Civil War, the few men left in the county could not work and brand all the cattle. Hence, when the men returned from war, the country was full of unbranded cattle. It was a scramble in which every man was for himself in getting those cattle branded. The branding of the mavericks brought another period to the people of the hill country. Desperadoes came to brand and steal cattle, as it was an easy place to hide and carry on their nefarious work.

Three times the desperate men killed the elected sheriff of Llano county, and at a public law and order meeting, the citizenry of Llano county elected Miles Barler as sheriff to bring back peace to their community. Each time Barler selected as his deputies men named Roundtree and Beason. Each time they came back with their man draped across their saddles as they had elected to shoot it out. I remember hearing Mr. Barler relate one of these fights. He had been elected sheriff at a mass meeting in the early afternoon. Shortly after, he and his deputies left Llano to trail the outlaw that had killed the sheriff. A few hours later, they overtook him on the road to Mason. The badman saw them coming and stopped and waited till he recognized them. The outlaw dismounted and shot at them with his Winchester. Barler and his deputies returned the fire, shooting once each. When they came to the man and examined him, they found he had been hit between the eyes, in the neck, and in the heart region. Each time Barler resigned as sheriff as soon as the emergency was over. He did not like to be a peace officer, but he felt it was his duty to act when the peace of the community was threatened.

Always standing up for the right in his community brought Barler many enemies, and his life was threatened many times. He usually wore two Colt 45's and a skinning knife. One day the Llano River was on a big rise and help was needed to rescue some people who had become marooned. Barler, along with other men of the town answered the call, but Barler, in his hurry, forgot to put on his revolvers. Barler was a small man of about a hundred and twenty-five pounds, and during the emergency, one of his enemies observed that he did not have his pistols. The big man decided that when the people were safe, it would be the time to give Barler a whale of a beating. The big man walked up and knocked Barler down with the first blow, but Barler was like a cat. He was on his feet in a moment and pushed at the man, drawing his hunting knife. As luck would have it, the scabbard to the knife came out with the knife, and when Barler struck, the knife pierced the bottom of the scabbard and only cut the man a small cut. That was sufficient for the big man, and he quit the fight as fast as his feet would take him. Later in life he became a good friend of Barler.

Miles Barler had been threatened so many times that each morning he would have one of his sons to reconnoiter the surroundings before he went out of the house. One morning, Lee Barler reported to his father that about twenty men were lying in ambush for him below the bank of the Llano River. Realizing the odds against him, he sent one of his boys to town for aid, knowing that his friends, Stoutmeyer, Beason, and Roundtree, along with many others, would come to his rescue. As soon as sufficient aid arrived, Barler and his friends executed a flanking movement, flushed the desperadoes from cover, and engaged them in a running fight through the town of Llano.

Buttery

Henry C. Buttery (I) said that on the morning of this fight, he arrived at the store about seven o'clock and he found his partner, John Barler, sitting down behind kegs of nails, out of sight, loading his Winchester. Just as he arrived, Mr. Stoutimeyer came in with an empty saddle gun that was hot, grabbed up a new loaded Winchester, and rushed out to the fray. The fight was soon over, the desperadoes leaving town on the run and leaving their dead behind. The townspeople suffered a few wounded.

Barler's enemies through some political maneuvers gained control of the grand jury and indicted him. Their plan was to get Barler's guns out of his possession and then kill him while he was on trial. The plan leaked out, so the day of the trial, Barler put his objections to surrendering his guns to the judge with the argument that he was not going to be a clay pigeon for anyone. About the time the argument grew hot, two of Barler's friends, who were crack shots, took their position in the door of the courtroom. The judge finally agreed to let Barler keep his guns. When the trial was well under way, a member of the opposition climbed a tree outside of the courtroom, fired at Barler, but missed. Before he could shoot again, Barler shot him out of the tree, and he was dead when he hit the ground. The jury returned a verdict of "Not guilty" in the case against Barler.

Like the era of the marauding Indians, the era of the outlaw passed in Llano county and a peaceful time came to bless the people. Barler had been successful in his business ventures, so in his later years he retired from active business other than renting houses and loaning money.

With the price on his head because of his stand for law and order, he kept up his target practice every day of his life. In the summer he would lie on his cot behind his house and shoot at the wasps as they flew to their nests on the eaves of the second story of his house. In the wintertime, he would light a candle, sit on the cedar post of the garden gate, and see how near he could shoot out the flame, without completely extinguishing the flame.

One day after he had retired, he was reading an advertisement of the Barler Ideal Heater. Something made him feel that the manufacturer of this heater was a member of his own family, so he wrote a letter to the concern for information. In a few days he had a letter from his older brother. The letter informed him that his parents were long past dead and the family had given up hearing from their lost brother. Miles Barler immediately made a trip to Chicago to see his people and spent a month with them. He discovered that his brother was the colonel of the Federal regiment to whom his company had surrendered. He came back to Llano with stories of his trip. While in Chicago, he bought and brought back home an Edison phonograph and a large collection of records. This was the first phonograph in Llano county, and he spent most of his time going over the country, giving phonograph concerts, and talking prohibition.

During the time, Barler enjoyed life very much, but the death of his beloved wife seemed to take the joy out of his life. On December 16, 1907, he quietly passed out of this life about sundown with the assurance that he had lived a good life and was ready to meet his master whom he had so diligently served.

In 1916, I wrote a letter to the postmaster of Whitby, Yorkshire, England, and asked him to pass the letter that I had written to anyone in his town by the name of Buttery. The following is a copy of the letter that I received from a cousin in Whitby. L. L. Buttery

"18 John Street
Whitby, Yorkshire, England
6/9/16

Dear Sir:

Or should I call you cousin? Your letter to the postmaster of Whitby was forwarded to me, who am the only "Buttery" in the district and I drifted here twelve years ago, after being in other parts of the country.

From what I can gather -- your grandfather, John Buttery, and his brother William Buttery emigrated to the U.S.A. leaving their brother and my grandfather, Thomas Buttery, in England.

A sister of these three men, Hannah, married a Robinson and a daughter of this couple -- who, of course, is herself an old lady -- has given me the following facts. This lady's name, who knows the whole history, is Mrs. Captain Foster, Boulmer, Crescent Avenue, Whitby.

I call to see her last night and she told me that your grandfather, John Buttery, married his cousin, Detsy Heslop. They began their married life at the Tunnel Inn, as that is now the village of Grosmont, six miles from here. Falling on evil days, John went to America and afterwards sent for his family, one daughter, Mary, died in Liverpool. She arrived with her children, John, Jane, Margaret, Thomas, Henry; and I daresay that you are the descendant from one of these. The last letter the above Mrs. Foster had was about thirty years ago from Jane Buttery from Llano, Texas.

Now, if this is correct, we are related and I must give you a bit of our family history.

The first of the year 1908 was a very successful one for the Department of the Interior. The work of the Bureau of Land Management was particularly noteworthy. The Bureau of Reclamation also did much to advance the interests of the people of the West. The Bureau of Indian Affairs continued its efforts to improve the conditions of the Indian population.

Very truly yours,

John D. Smith, Secretary of the Interior
Washington, D. C.

Dear Cousin:

I passed my letter on to Captain Foster whose wife is a first cousin to your father and my father. I have been to Captain Foster and read the account he has given you. To me, having Mrs. Foster to talk to, it is as clear as daylight. I hope it proves to be so to you, although not possessing my advantage. Any "gossipy" news will not be of interest to you; therefore, with my thanks to Captain and Mrs. Foster, I close, trusting the budget gives you all the

Mr. Buttery

Dear Sir:

William Buttery has passed your letter on to me and my wife has done her best. I wish she could have seen to write; you might have got more details, but my writing days are done. I am bordering on 80, left eye gone, and my sight is very dim. My wife is bordering on 82; although previously a good writer, she cannot see to write her name. Hoping you will be able to gather something from this. I remain, dear sir,

Yours respectfully,

R. Foster
for Margaret Foster

Answering your questions in William Buttery's letter:

First: There is no family tree of the Butterys and we do not know where to get one as there are no Butterys in this neighborhood, but your family and my wife are the only ones that can supply any information whatsoever.

Second: All your forebearers have been farmers or connected with the land.

Third: Your great-great-grandfather was a Congregationalist; all the other elders were Church of England. We have no record of great-grandfather Heslop. John Heslop, an excise man, retired on his pension in his latter years. His mother was Mary Buttery, sister to our great-grandfather.

Fourth: You get your Scotch descent from Margaret Pattison, your great-grandmother. We only understand that Margaret Pattison's father built Spittle Bridge in Whitby, but there are no Pattisons here. She and her two brothers were left orphans. The brothers went to sea and we never knew anything about them.

Fifth: Colonel Buttery was no relation of ours so far as we know. (Note: Colonel Buttery was very prominent in the allied command in 1916 and was killed in France).

Sixth: Germany has been preparing for war for years and the Kaiser's object is clear.

Seventh: Our great-great-grandfather, Thomas Buttery, married a Miss Donkin, and lived and owned a small farm about 20 or 25 acres called Cliff House, situated at Ibundale, a half mile from Slights and three miles from here. He left the farm to his son, Thomas, (our great-grandfather), who married Mary Spence. This Thomas Buttery left Cliff House and the farm to his children. And now it is owned by John Johnson, a farmer who married Mary Buttery, having bought it from the trustee of her father, Thomas Buttery. It had been in three Thomas Butterys' hands. William Buttery, schoolmaster, is the grandson of the Thomas Buttery III and a nephew of Mary Johnson, the present owner of Cliff House.

Thomas Buttery III, your great-grandfather and Miss Pattison (Scotch) died and left issue four sons and three daughters.

First: Son James went to Australia, died, left no issue.

Second: Son Thomas married Mary Spence, died, left two sons and two daughters, to wit: Margaret, died and left no issue. Thomas died and left three daughters and two sons. This family lives about Gainsbrough in Cleveland, 30 miles north of Whitby. William died leaving five sons and three daughters. William Buttery, schoolmaster, is his son. Daughter Mary left two daughters.

Third: Son John, your grandfather, went to Austin, Texas, about 65 years ago. He married his cousin, Betsy Heslop. They took with them children, to wit: John, Jane, Margaret, William, and Henry. Mary died of fever at Liverpool before sailing.

Fourth: Son William married Ann Hodgson. They went to Austin at the same time as your grandfather. They took children John, Margaret, Mary, and Ann. You perhaps know about them; we know nothing.

First: Daughter Mary married Jonathan Dud, died, no issue.

Second: Daughter Ann Buttery married John Harewood, a farmer. She died 40 years ago. She leaves three sons and three daughters, namely: Johnson, William, John, Mary, Alice, and Ann. Johnson died and left one daughter. William died and left no issue. John immigrated to America about 40 years ago and lived about twelve miles from Chicago. He married some woman in America. He bought land about twelve miles from Chicago. Mary Harewood married David Jennings and emigrated to America somewhere about Chicago. She Third: Daughter Hannah Buttery, sister of your grandfather and daughter of Thomas Buttery II, married John Robinson, farmer. She died in 1882 at Slights, leaving one son and one daughter. Son, John Robinson, farmer living at Grosmont. Daughter, Margaret, married Richard Foster, a Master Mariner (my wife). We have one son and he has three children.

My wife wishes to make one comment. That is that the family always knew your grandfather took his fall in business very badly, but no one lost anything by him, only his relations. His break in business was due to many causes. He lived at the Tunnel Inn, rented land, and made other speculations that did not turn out satisfactorily. Tunnel Inn is now Grosmont, six miles from Whitby."

This information was supplied by Albert R. Buttery, 19 North Irene Street, San Angelo, Texas. L. L. Buttery

"My grandfather was William Buttery. As far as I know his family lived about seven miles northeast of Austin, on a farm. My mother lived on an adjoining farm, and they grew up knowing each other for years. The Buttery children were my father, William Patterson Buttery; his brother, Thomas Buttery -- later a general contractor; Julia Buttery, who later married a Mr. McClure and lived in Big Springs, Texas, until her death there in 1947. The other sister I don't know the name of. At last knowledge, she still lived on the old Buttery homestead near Waller, Texas.

My father, William Patterson Buttery, was born near Austin in 1863, growing up on the Buttery farm there. He naturally became a farmer, and engaged in this activity there -- until he emigrated to Miles, Texas. He married my mother, Minnie Moore, in 1894. She was one of eleven children of Albert Eugene Moore, a Confederate War veteran. Mr. Moore farmed near Austin, and later lived in town until his death in 1926; he was buried in Austin. My father and mother moved to Miles, Texas, in 1897. They farmed several miles east of Miles. Later they moved into town, where he engaged in a meat market and land office business. My father died in Miles on July 2, 1914, and was buried in Miles Cemetery. My mother and family moved to San Angelo, January 1, 1919. She engaged in various occupations to make a living -- sewing, keeping lodgers, and real estate. She died in San Angelo on April 13, 1954, and was buried beside my father and his mother, Mrs. William Buttery.

The five children of William Patterson Buttery were as follows:

Edna Buttery, born in 1898, died in San Angelo on March 30, 1946, and was buried in Big Lake Cemetery beside her only child, Henrietta, who died August, 1929, at the age of one year. She was injured in a car wreck. Edna was a bookkeeper and married W. H. Schooler, a Magnolia Petroleum Company wholesale agent. After the death of her child, she worked for her husband as bookkeeper. Her death was due to burns from explosion of the butane system in her home, which burned completely.

Birdie Buttery, born June, 1902, attended Miles and San Angelo schools, worked mostly in women's stores as clerk. Married to Charles E. Baird in Tyler, Texas, on February 1, 1934; she still lives in Tyler with no children.

Eugene Earl Buttery was born in Miles, September 10, 1905. He attended Miles and San Angelo schools, and emigrated to Los Angeles, California, March, 1924. He has engaged in various occupations and is now a sewing machine repairman, selling them and renting them. Married his first wife, Maxine Mason, in 1928 and was divorced in 1933. He married his second and present wife, Amelia in February, 1935. Their only child, E. E. Buttery, Jr., is now 22 years old, married, and has a small infant son, Roy Buttery.

William Patterson Buttery, Jr., was born February 15, 1909, in Miles, Texas. He attended Miles and San Angelo schools and graduated from San Angelo High School, July, 1925. He worked in oil field drug stores until 1929 when he passed Texas State Board of Pharmacy and became a registered druggist. He graduated from Texas University in 1937 and was in the medical corps at Fort McArthur, Los Angeles, California, 1941-45. He was employed at Kaiser Hospital in Ontario, California, just east of Los Angeles. He is unmarried.

Albert Richardson Buttery was born in Miles, Texas, April 26, 1912, and attended and graduated from San Angelo High School, January, 1931. He worked at various jobs, none permanent, until 1937. 1937-May 1941, he worked for a local wholesale grocery house. May 16, 1941, he was employed at Goodfellow Air Force Base, Texas. He has been employed continuously for the government ever since in several capacities, and is now an aircraft mechanic.

My grandfather, William Buttery, was a farmer near Austin. All I know about him was that he died in or about 1908 or 1910, and was buried, I think, in Austin. My grandmother Buttery came to our home in Miles, and lived in a house near ours up until her death there in 1918. She is buried there beside my father who died in 1914. Now my mother is buried beside my father.

My father had one brother, Tom Buttery; he became a general contractor, and built many structures in Texas. One here in San Angelo was the old Santa Fe Passenger Depot. Tom was married the second time to Carrie Williams of Austin. As far as I know she still lives there if she is alive. Tom died in 1910 in Austin.

My father had two sisters, Lou and Julia Buttery. I never did know much about my Aunt Lou. She married, I know, but I never did know her married name. She lived on the old Buttery estate near Waller and Hempstead.

Julia later married a man named McClure and lived in Big Springs until her death about 1947. My aunt Julia had several children by Mr. McClure -- Ethel, Mabel, Walter (a girl), Pearl, Elmer, and Bernie.

Ethel married Leck Sears, an engineer who worked in power plants. He was here in the San Angelo power plant at the time you said you were here in 1919. They have been living in Fort Worth for about 35 years, where he works in the Fort Worth Light and Power Company.

Mabel married a Big Springs man named Stewart. They had only one child named Edna Laverne. She must have been named for my sister, Edna, although she did not have the name Laverne. Mr. and Mrs. Stewart were divorced about 1946. He was the Sinclair dealer in Big Springs. Mabel now lives in San Angelo.

Walter married Lyle Curry and lived in Ballinger for many years. They have a four-section ranch ten miles northwest of Ballinger. They had one child, Lyle Curry, Jr., who now lives in Fort Worth and is in the used furniture business.

Elmer was a Texas Ranger for many years, about 1910-1922. I only saw him one time when I was a child. He came to our house one time about 1922. He died about 1940.

Bernie still lives in Big Springs. I never did know much about him.

Pearl married and still lives in Big Springs. Her husband was sheriff of Howard county several years ago.

Well, that is about all of the story of the West Texas Butterys. I hope this enlightens you about our clan, and I have given you all I know about all the Butterys on my side. My family and I are the only ones of our family here in San Angelo now, besides A. J., and I don't see him very often any more. If my mother was still alive I could give you much more, but I can't remember all she used to tell me."

NORTH CAROLINA and TENNESSEE BEDFORDS

By

Redmond Selecman Cole

Box 58

Tulsa, Oklahoma

5-23-1929

The writer is a descendant of the Virginia Bedfords who lived many years ago in Gloucester, Goochland Cumberland, Charlotte and other adjoining Virginia Counties. Have been engaged for about a quarter of a century in collecting data for a Family History of this Bedford Family. In my ramifications I have come across what appears to be an entirely separate and distinct Bedford Family. Traces of this family have been found in North Carolina, Tennessee, Missouri, and in Texas. The similarity of names and of traditions convinces me that the persons named herein are all of the same family, that is have a common origin, and as indicated above are not related at all, or if so not closely related to the Bedfords of Virginia.

These paragraphs are prepared from data collected from intensive correspondence with members of the families named. Some of the facts stated are based on tradition and may or may not prove authentic. This record is not intended to be a final draft and is subject to amendment and correction, as definite facts are brought to light. Any reader is cautioned to accept the statements herein contained with this preliminary explanation. This is prepared solely as an initial step to promote, if possible, a search by the members of this family, which will eventually show the true relationships.

Much of the tradition must be disregarded as plainly incorrect. A California lady wrote me as follows: "Thomas Allin Bedford (mentioned herein) always said that the first arrivals in this country were two brothers Jubilee and Seth Bedford." Now if this refers to the Jubilee M. Bedford and Seth Bedford, mentioned herein, the statement manifestly is incorrect and confusing, for these men lived in Tennessee, and were no doubt sons of a prior emigrant from the old Country. However, the fact, may be true that these men were brothers.

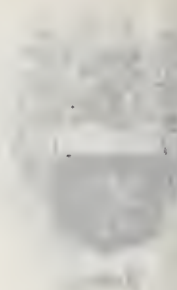

Jonas D. Bedford of Kingsland, Texas, wrote me that his grandfather, James Bedford, was from Missouri, originally from Tennessee. Without intending in the least to be critical of my informants, let me remark that this statement is substantially correct, no doubt, but prior to going to Tennessee he undoubtedly was from North Carolina.

I say, therefore, that I have sorted over the material I have, and feel reasonably sure that the most plausible account of these families can be found in the following paragraphs.

STATE OF NEW YORK

IN SENATE

JANUARY 1, 1910

The report of the Board of Regents of the University of the State of New York, in relation to the proposed changes in the curriculum of the State University, is hereby adopted, and the same are hereby approved, and the same are hereby ordered to be printed, and the same are hereby ordered to be distributed to the several colleges and universities of the State.

And it is further ordered, that the Board of Regents be and they are authorized to make such further changes in the curriculum of the State University as may be deemed advisable, and to report the same to the Senate of the State at its next session.

And it is further ordered, that the Board of Regents be and they are authorized to make such further changes in the curriculum of the State University as may be deemed advisable, and to report the same to the Senate of the State at its next session.

And it is further ordered, that the Board of Regents be and they are authorized to make such further changes in the curriculum of the State University as may be deemed advisable, and to report the same to the Senate of the State at its next session.

And it is further ordered, that the Board of Regents be and they are authorized to make such further changes in the curriculum of the State University as may be deemed advisable, and to report the same to the Senate of the State at its next session.

A Texas Correspondent writes me as follows:

"The first Bedford I know of was of the peerage of England according to tradition. His son was an officer in the English Navy and was stationed in New York before the Revolutionary war. After the war was over he returned to America, married a New York girl and moved to North Carolina and had a large family."

Again without assuming the role of a critic, let me say that this story about the connection of the American Bedfords with the peerage of England, is, I feel sure, based on known fact. I state this for the reason that among my own Bedford I find the identical tradition and have, to my own satisfaction, at least, exploded the tradition. One statement will, I think, show the error. The Duke of Bedford, in England was a title and not a family name. The family name of the man who carried the title was "Russell". I have on my shelves a history of this family and there is nothing in it to indicate that any man named Bedford was an English peer. So much for that.

My Texas correspondent also advised me that his great grandfather, JAMES BEDFORD, at the age of 14 left the home of his parents in North Carolina and went to Tennessee never to communicate with his parents. In Tennessee it is said that he reared two large families, being twice married. When Tennessee became settled he decided to move to Texas. It was while on the way to Texas with the family, that his son, James Franklin Bedford, died. James went on to Texas and died and was buried at Paris, Texas. The writer visited his grave in Paris. This same correspondent gave the following as the names of his children: Jonas, Nellie, Jane, James Franklin, Thomas, Seth, George and Massie. Assuming this list to be correct, and I think it is substantially so, it would seem to account for all the Bedfords mentioned in the following paragraphs, with the possible exception of Jubilee M. Bedford, who could have been a child of this same James Bedford, by a different marriage. My Texas correspondent also says that this James Bedford was born in 1776 and died 1853. Assuming this man was a son of the naval officer above, his birth date is incorrect.

Records gathered from the archives of Obion County, Tennessee seem to verify, in part at least, the theory that all these Bedfords here mentioned were descendants of James. These records show numerous references to Seth Bedford, Jonas Bedford, James Bedford, J. M. Bedford (probably Jubilee M.), H. H. Bedford, and A. M. Bedford (probably Alfred M.). Obion County is not far distant from the place at which the Missouri Bedfords lived. Jonas Bedford owned thousands of acres of land in Obion County. Seth Bedford was first chairman of its County Court. J. M. Bedford was a trustee of the county in 1836 and was Revenue Commissioner 1829-31. Assuming then that Jubilee M. Bedford, was as above indicated a son of

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR

General Land Office
Washington, D. C.
April 15, 1897

TO THE SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR
FROM THE COMMISSIONER OF THE GENERAL LAND OFFICE
RE: REPORT OF THE COMMISSIONER OF THE GENERAL LAND OFFICE
ON THE PROGRESS OF THE WORK OF THE OFFICE DURING THE YEAR

The following report was submitted to the Secretary of the Interior on the 15th day of April, 1897, by the Commissioner of the General Land Office, in compliance with the provisions of the Act of March 3, 1879, relating to the duties of the Commissioner of the General Land Office.

The report contains a detailed statement of the work of the General Land Office during the year 1896, and is divided into two parts, the first of which contains a general statement of the work of the office, and the second of which contains a detailed statement of the work of the office in each of the several branches of its business.

JAMES BEDFORD, who left North Carolina as a boy, it follows, that the following were a part at least of the family:

Jubilee M. Bedford B. 1799 married Elizabeth Hale.
Seth Bedford, B. 1795 married Polly Ray.
Jonas Bedford
Nellie Bedford B. in Tennessee in 1812 never married.
Jane Bedford
James Franklin Bedford married Lucy Ann Moore.
Thomas Bedford
George Bedford
Massa Bedford.
And there were probably others.

JUBILEE M. BEDFORD (probably son of James who lived in Tennessee, later in Missouri and died in Texas) was born, so records in his family disclose in North Carolina. His wife was Elizabeth Hale. He is said to have been born in 1799. He was living in Jackson County, Tennessee in 1823 when his son, H. H. Bedford was born. I think it reasonably certain that he is the same J. M. Bedford who served as Revenue Commissioner of Obion County 1829-1831 and Trustee for Obion County in 1836. Whether he died in Tennessee or went to Missouri, I know not. His family appears to have consisted of 4 children:

Alfred M. Bedford b. 3/17, 1820.
Seth L. Bedford b. 2/19, 1822.
Henry Hale Bedford, b. Jackson Co. Tenn., 11/27, 1823.
John H. Bedford, b. 10/12, 1834.

Among the known grandchildren of Jubilee M. Bedford, I list
Mrs. Clay A. Moseley of Bloomfield, Missouri;
Mrs. Ada Hequenbury of Charleston, Missouri.

SETH BEDFORD (probably a brother or half-brother of Jubilee M. Bedford, and probably son of James Bedford, above) seems most certainly to have been the man who served as one of the first Justices of Obion County, Tennessee, when it was created. His descendants have preserved his family record. He was born 1-6-1795 and died December __, 1846. Since some, at least, of his children were born in Obion County, Tennessee, I think I am safe in concluding that he is related to all the families here mentioned. His wife was Polly Ray, born July 12, 1795. His marriage was in 1816.

Mary Ann Bedford b. 11/19/1833
married _____ Atwood
Frances H. Bedford b. 9/22/1838.

Among the descendants of this man (Seth Bedford) I note:

Thomas Allin Bedford b. 1842, living at Potts Camp, Miss. in 1927.
Thomas Allin Keen, of Potts Camp, Mississippi.
Mrs. William Caruthers, Ontarion, California.
Mrs. Sarah Eleanor Buchanan, 3931 Elm Street, Dallas, Texas.
Dr. W. A. Maupin, of Rawlett, Texas.

JONAS BEDFORD (Probably son of James Bedford, above) was certainly a resident of Obion County, Tenn., for many years. I am inclined to think that he is the ancestor of that family of Bedfords now found in Memphis and at Moscow, Tenn. From his grandchildren (That is from the grandchildren of a Jonas Bedford, presumed to be this man) living in Tennessee, I learn that he has at least one son, John Bedford, who because of his service in the Civil War was known as Captain John Bedford. It seems reasonably certain that Captain John lived in Obion County, but he died at Moscow, Tennessee. The children of Captain John Bedford were: James, Alex, Jeff, Ann, who never married, and John. I have a list of the children of John (son of John) as follows:

Margaret Frances King, of Memphis; Edmund, Jonas
of Memphis;
Robert Alex of Moscow; John Ella Mason of Moscow;
James Anna, Priscilla Jane Baldwin of Moscow;
Bettie Smith of Oakville; Mattie Burdison of Moscow; Emma Bedford of Moscow and Hugh Calhoun Bedford of Bay Mynette, Alabama.

JAMES FRANKLIN BEDFORD (son of James Bedford, above) left Tennessee and came to Missouri. It appears that, with his father and perhaps the families of both of them, they started to Texas. He was married 8/18/1836 to Lucy Ann Moore, who died 3/20/1851. They had seven children, as follows:

Thomas Jefferson Bedford, b. 7/25/1837

George W. Bedford, b. 11/1/1839,
m. Lillian Gertrude Jennings

Julia Bedford, b. 11/22/1841

Eleanor Jane Bedford, b. 1/25/1844

Jonas D. Bedford, b. 2/23/1846
m. Julia A. Duncan

Sarah (Massie Sarah) Bedford, b. 11/1/1848

Mississippi Ann Bedford, b. 2/18/1851
m. Henry C. Buttery

Of the descendants of James Franklin Bedford, I note:

Jonas D. Bedford, living at Kingsland, Texas in 1925.

Mabel Bedford Craig, Fayetteville, Arkansas.

Mr. S. L. Bedford, Paris, Texas.

Dr. L. L. Buttery, Cuero, Texas.

_____ Bedford (probably a son of James Bedford, above). Have not yet determined the name of this ancestor, but have been furnished with the following children:

Jonas Monroe Bedford, who died at Eastland, Texas.

George Pool Bedford.

Lawson Bedford.

James Madison Bedford.

Martha Bedford,

m. _____ Killian.

Elizabeth Bedford,

m. _____ Quillen.

Of the grandchildren, I note:

Wm. Charles Bedford of Desdemonia, Texas

John S. Bedford, of Fresno, California

Mrs. Susan Steele of Eastland, Texas

Mrs. John Walker of Gallant, Alabama

Joe M. Bedford of Los Angeles, California

William H. Bedford (b. 1847) living in 1914 at 5530 East Side Avenue, Dallas, Texas.

NOTE: Connected no doubt with the foregoing Bedfords, are some Bedfords who lived during the Civil War period in Rutherford Co. Forth, Carolina. I have in my file a will of Jonas Bedford, dated 3/31/1859, probated November, 1869 in that county, which names Margaret as his wife. Evidently he had no children, as he left his property to his wife for her life and then to his nephew, Jonas Bedford. This will also makes mention of Dr. V. J. Palmer, nephew. This last named may have been a nephew on the wife's side.

As noted several times above, this data should not be accepted as setting out established facts, especially with reference to the true family relationships. In other respects I feel that the data is reasonably authentic. Anyone seeing this short account of this Bedford Family, who can supplement it, or point out any inaccuracies would confer upon the undersigned a personal favor, and would I feel sure, oblige many of the persons named herein who have so kindly assisted me in trying to get the true account of this family.

MILES BARLER

By Jane Ellen Nicholson

Texas, once a barren waste land, was settled by men of a particular breed. These men seem to us today sometimes harsh, but they did what was necessary to preserve life and settle the frontier. Miles Barler was one of these men. He was a pioneer, Indian fighter, Confederate soldier, cattleman, merchant, and citizen. His life covered seventy-five years and during this time he was active and fearless. During his lifetime he made the transition from "Martinique of justice" to Santa Claus.

Miles Barler was born in Illinois in 1833; he was the first son of John Barler and his second wife, Catherine Lee. Orphaned at an early age, he and his siblings made their home with relatives, changing homes regularly. In 1850, the Oatman family was on its way to Texas, and Miles Barler and brother paid them $25 to bring them. They arrived in Texas late in 1850 and went directly to Bastrop County where they remained for seven years. During this time Barler worked for the Oatmans and saved his money and invested it in stock. His brother died, leaving a widow and daughter who married a man by the name of Lambert. Finally in 1851 Barler and the Oatman family moved to Llano in Llano County, where they remained the rest of their lives. Miles Barler married Jane Buttery, an English girl, in 1858. She was born in Whitby, England. She was one of sixteen children. The family came to Texas in 1845. Her father, John Buttery, was by profession a contractor. He lost everything he had in a business venture. Rather than be a pauper in England he came to the wilds of Central Texas. He later built the first state capital in Austin.

In 1859 they moved into their own home which was to later become Barler Flat in Llano. Until this time they lived with her family. Her father was John Buttery, an engineering contractor, who built the first capitol of Texas which later burned.

In 1862, Barler went into the Civil War. He was a member of the Mabey Company which was formed in Llano and made up of men from that country. They left Llano in the spring of 1862 and returned in the spring of 1865, at the close of the war. In March 1864, while he was attached to General Walker's command, the enemy was sighted near the Reed River in Louisiana. The Confederate forces being horribly outnumbered decided to fall back so they could obtain a better position out of reach of the enemy gunboats. As the retreat began, one company from each regiment was detached to go to Fort De Russy on the Red River and serve as a decoy while the main body of the troops escaped. Miles Barler was among one of the companies detached to serve as a decoy. There were only about one hundred men in the fort, but they were able to hold out long enough for the Walker Division to get to safety. The odds were 100 Confederates to about 20,000 Unionists. When the fort was taken the "Yankees" were much surprised to find only a handful of the division in the fort.

The prisoners were taken to New Orleans where they remained nearly four months until their exchange. They were aided by the women of New Orleans during their enternment. No one was allowed inside the prison unless they were related to one of the prisoners. Each prisoner soon acquired relatives of his own which helped him immensely. During the imprisonment, Barler and some of the other men began to make articles to be sold by their relatives. This money enabled them to have many things that made life easier. Some of the men were even aided in their escape by the "kind women of N.O."¹ They were taken to Shreveport and exchanged. After a 60-day furlough, they returned to the war and remained until 1865.

When Miles Barler, a Confederate, was taken prisoner by the Federal forces under General Banks, his brother, John Barler, a Yankee, who served in Company K of the 47th Illinois Division, aided in the capture of the brother. The two brothers had been separated when Miles came to Texas. Both brothers went through the battle and the capture without recognizing each other. It was not until they both were old men that the brothers found out that the other was still alive and the full story of the battle was known. Their meeting occurred by chance. John Barler happened to see an ad in a newspaper of a Barler Oil Heating Company and wondering if the head of the concern might be some kin of his, he wrote to the company. He learned that the oil man was a nephew of his and a son of another brother, Oison, who had been separated from him also. The nephew wrote his long lost uncle and gave him the address of Miles Barler. John wrote to Miles at once expressing his desire to see a real Johnny Rebel. The result was that Miles planned to visit him at his home in Stark County, Illinois. In June of that year Miles journeyed to Illinois. He walked into the brother's blacksmith shop and asked him if he would fix his wagon for credit. John Barler replied that he took no business on credit. Miles took hold of his brother and said, "Well, I guess here's a real live Johnny Rebel, and if you don't fix that wagon, I guess you'll see how a real live Johnny can act."² When the word "Johnny" was spoken the two shook hands, for the first time in 56 years.

² Unidentified newspaper article.

After the war, Miles Barler returned to Texas. His life became a series of events that to us today seem usual and in some cases hard to believe. During the Civil War the Indians, knowing that most of the men were away from home, became extremely troublesome. With the fall of the Confederacy in 1865 and the returning of the soldiers to civilian life, the men had to defend themselves and their homes from the Indians until they were no longer a threat to their safety. Miles Barler was always ready to answer the call to arms against the Indians. Many of these incidents may be found in his autobiography, Early Days in Llano. One of these events stands out in mind, not only because of its adventurous light, but because of the humorous side which does much to show the inquisitive nature of Miles Barler. In the early 1870's, Indians, probably Comanche, had stolen all of Miles Barler's horses. He and some of his neighbors who had also been raided by the Indians formed a posse and rode after the savages. When the Indians were finally encountered, a gun battle followed in which several Indians were killed. One of the dead men had been shot by Barler. Barler had always heard that the Indians came back to get their dead after night fall, so to prove this idea was wrong, he sat on the dead Indian until morning. There are several other of these Indian exploits which may be found in his book. I have heard it said by men who knew him that he would rather have killed Indians than flies.

Miles Barler always stood on the side of law and order and was willing to fight for it. On numerous occasions he was a member of various possies organized to go after thieves. In the early days Llano County was over-run with thieves and bandits. Barler served as deputy sheriff for a number of years under Sheriff Bozarth, who could always depend on Barler for help. Many of these incidents can be found in his book, Early Days in Llano, and I will not attempt to elaborate on them. There is, however, one unrecorded incident that I believe merits particular attention. One day Sheriff Bozarth was having a gun battle in the street with some outlaws; he was backing down the street in the direction of Miles Barler's store and was running low on ammunition. Barler, standing in the doorway of his store, noticed the plight of Bozarth and immediately grabbed his shotgun and ran into the street. He told the Sheriff that he would hold them off until he went into his store and got ammunition. His exact words were, "I'll keep the dogs off of you." In addition to being a Deputy Sheriff, he also accompanied the Texas Rangers on several occasions. He was known by the Rangers, and when in the vicinity, they would always stop by to see if he would like to join them. He loved the excitement and was always a good man to have around in a fight. Miles Barler killed many men but never once, to my knowledge, did he ever shoot a man in cold blood. He was not a killer.

In his day he was a leading citizen of Llano County. Llano experienced its "boom days" around 1880. During this period the main concern of the people of the county was to have the railroad come to Llano. The Aransas Pass Railroad offered to put a line into Llano if the citizens would pay for the section down to Sandy Creek, the railroad paying for the rest of it. Twenty-seven men from the county signed their names to the note to pay for it; Miles Barler was one of the signers. Captain W. H. Miller was responsible for the railroad making this concession; therefore, he and the others were held responsible for the full balance of the note when the citizens of Llano failed to get the money together. The railroad brought suit against Miller and the others; the case was taken to court and the men of Llano lost. The case was appealed through the state and finally resulted in a judgement against the citizens. M. M. Hargus, who was the county clerk at the time, paid the note from his own pocket on April 19, 1898. All Hargus received was the valuable consideration of the men involved. Miles Barler had to take a lien on most of his property to pay his portion of the debt. The total of the debt was 20,000 dollars. He took great pride in Llano, "His Town," and throughout his life was active in civic endeavors.

Barler's business affairs were as varied as they could be. For most of his life he owned and lived partly on a ranch just outside of Llano. The ranch was on Pecan Creek and consisted of 1280 acres. He also had a combination hardware and grocery store located in the old Watkins Building, which is still standing in Llano. Miles Barler had very little education, and when asked how he made money, he answered that he marked everything up 100 per cent, and more paid than didn't, so he usually broke even. He was never known to refuse to give credit to anyone. Miles Barler and his family always had the best of everything; they were the first to have carpets, electric lights, bath tubs, and the diphone in Llano County. He loved gadgets and was always buying new inventions to see what made them work; he could never resist a new or novel item. I have heard it said by those who knew Miles Barler that he could make money sitting on a rock in the middle of a stream.

In the early days it was necessary for a man to have a good horse. Horses were the basis of a man's existence, and Miles Barler was no exception. He was known for his fine horses and prided himself in them. One horse which Miles Barler had for years became his trademark in Llano; his name was "Old Sorrel." This horse was with Barler on many of his experiences in law enforcement and was later used to pull a buggy. There were always dogs around the Barler household, and all the pet dogs were named "Mulkey." As soon as a "Mulkey" would die, another one would appear on the scene. One of the "Mulkeys" served as watchdog as well as a pet, and he was feared by all the strangers. The local butcher was calling on the Barler hired girl and was deathly afraid of the dog. Before he would come to call on the girl, he would butcher a choice piece of meat for the dog, so he could get through the gate safely.

The Barler home was the center of activities in Llano. The family was always offering their house for church and civic gatherings. Miles Barler loved to dance; so he had a dance floor built in back of the house. This pavilion was the center of many of the social functions in Llano.

Miles Barler spent his later years in serenity compared to his earlier ones. He joined the Christian Church, after a life time of threatening to do so. In the closing years of his life, he paid particular attention to little girls of Llano. He delighted in gathering them together in his buggy and going to the country on picnics.

His obituary states that at his funeral, "A delegation of little girls of Llano were present to participate in the exercises, Mr. Barler having been devoted to the little girls of Llano, often rendering them little pleasures and attention, and they will deeply feel his loss." ³

During the later years of his life, Barler wrote the significant incidents of his life in narrative form. This book, Early Days in Llano, first appeared in the Llano Times as weekly articles. It was later reprinted in its present form upon the request of many of his friends and relatives. This book has never been for publication or for sale. He consented to have it published only for the use and benefit of his children and friends. Some of the copies of it were sent to close friends of his; they enjoyed the book, and many of them wrote to him telling him so. J. F. McLead wrote this about the book:

Your life had indeed been a cherished one, such as few men experience in this life; so full of dangers and hardships. But amidst all of your dangers and hardships, I could trace a great deal of humor and fun ... While reading your history, I can imagine I am in your presence again telling some of your thrilling adventures. ⁴

³ Llano Times (Llano), Thursday, December 19, 1907.

⁴ Taken from a letter to Miles Barler by J. F. McLean of Woolsey, Georgia. Dated March 12, 1907.

Copies of this book can be obtained from any remaining member of the Barler family. This book is truly a bit of history from the pen of a pioneer citizen.

Miles Barler lived to be a man of seventy-five. He had eight children, one of which, my grandmother, Jesse Barler Monroe, is still living. When Miles Barler died, Llano and the people grieved his loss. He had lived in that city the better part of his long life and had done his part to make it a decent place in which to live and work, and "in years gone by, barded his breast to every danger in blazing a more fitting path for coming generations."⁵ On the day of his funeral the Llano schools were dismissed, and all business houses were closed in honor of his memory. His death was also felt by those outside of Llano who knew him. A resolution dated February 8, 1908, by J. D. Harrison Camp, Confederate Veterans, stated in part,

As one of the early settlers, during the troublesome days, when the savage red and lawless white man menaced the safety of lives, homes, and property, he was among the leaders of that little band of brave and honest men who, regardless of risk to their own lives and property, made the daring and gallant sacrifices which resulted in driving the marauder and criminal from this part of the state. He was constant and uncompromising for the enforcement of law and order; he believed that every one was entitled to the quiet and peaceful enjoyment of what was rightful his own; he was zealous and untiring in encouraging wise and beneficial social and moral reforms; he knew no fear but the fear of doing wrong. Best, and highest of all, he was a consistent Christian gentleman, and when the final summons came, he was ready and prepared to enter into the reward of the faithful!

I believe this expresses Miles Barler.

1217 West Churchill
Stockton 4, California

October 14, 1957

Dear Cousin Annie:

You are wondering why I haven't written. We planned to go to Drain the first week in September. But when we realized that Monday of the first week would be Labor Day and the first Monday, second week California Admission Day, we changed our plans. Newspapers were screaming keep off highways and stay at home for three million autos would be on the highways. Cy came up with the answer. He would have a week's vacation beginning on September 28. He would take us in his car.

So, we got there after all. Ruby and husband, Glen Spock, came down from Portland. Myrtle, Claude, Ruby and I were all together for the first time in 40 years. Of course, we enjoyed the occasion.

Myrtle and family lived on a 40 acre place adjoining Drain. The husband died three years ago, and the children are married and away from the old place. Fortunately, a saw mill company bought 5 acres, and later a Plywood Manufacturing concern bought 17 acres. Each paid Myrtle $ 1,000.00 per acre for the land. So finally she was in the right place at the right time.

While at Myrtle's, we did a lot of jabbering about our parents' early life. None of us know much about our father so we gave up speculation.

I seemed to put together more about our mother than Claude, Myrtle or Ruby. Of course, I am five years older than Claude and ten years older than Ruby. My sisters and brothers agreed that they never knew me very well. I seem to never have been around home very much. I was unsocial and kept to myself. They maintained I read a great deal and did not want the "kids around me." They are right for I do not recall ever playing with them. I do not remember mother ever telling me anything about Llano. She did speak of Silver City, no details that I recall. Seems that Myrtle and Ruby were never told much about Llano.

We do not know when mother was born, when she was married, or when she went to Silver City. I do not know how her age 83 was determined at time of her passing. May be Myrtle knew. I was not close at the time. When we were youngsters we remember that my father had a pen artist enlarge a picture of mother when she was 20 years old. What became of these pictures I do not know, but maybe Claude or Myrtle does, any way these pictures had no connection with Llano.

We did not uncover much of anything, I guess. Much of what we think we know is mostly speculation and what you folks have given us. But I seem to remember, and Myrtle learned somehow that in 1890, or there about, we were in Gardiner at the hotel my father had leased when mother bought an organ and sewing machine with money that came from Texas (Llano).

Myrtle says that at the time Mother wanted to go to Llano, but father objected. Myrtle got this information in later years. I remember the organ but not the sewing machine, but not connected with money from Llano. So you can see how dim and uncertain mother's early life is to us. Father's is still dimmer. We know he had brothers and a sister in California long since deceased and that father was the youngest. The family came from Indiana in about 1854. This is all we know.

The best I can do is to give a brief chronological sketch of the movement of the Moore family.

1. I was born at Llano in 1878. I was six years old when Mother, with Claude, Myrtle and myself left Lalno or Silver City for Portland, Oregon-1878-6-1884. Father had a small shoe store and repair shop in Portland. Mother came by train to San Francisco, and by boat to Portland; arrived at cherry time -- perhaps June.
2. Perhaps in August, 1884 father and family went by train to Grants Pass, by stage to Kerrville, then by pack horse to Sucker Creek near Oregon Caves to place mine. (I talked with the elderly pack horse operator. He recalled the occasion.)
3. In the spring of 1885, the family was located on a homestead near Linkville (Klomath Falls). Father cleared sage brush land. We lived in a Jumper log cagin (so did other settlers). It snowed that winter, I remember. There was plenty of land in Eastern Oregon at that time.
4. In the spring of 1885 father traded his interest in the homestead for two yoke of oxen and homecovered wagon. Over the rough mountain road we traveled by ox team west to Jacksonville. Father sold the outfit and moved family to another homestead on William's Creek, 25 miles from Grant's Pass. Here we were in a log cabin for the winter. It snowed. Mother cooked on the open fireplace. I can recall all this.
5. In the spring of 1886 we moved down on the Hoxie ranch, a four miles west of post office Applegate. Again we lived in a one room rough board house until the house on Hoxie ranch was vacated. We were living in the one room board place when Ruby was born June, 1888.

6. In the fall of 1888 we moved a few miles north on the Applegate river (I should say east) to the Drew ranch. Now we had a two room, rough board house, very little furnishings. Here we got along fine. I went to school for the first time -- one room school. Now we owned an old wagon, one blind horse, and one mare. The crop corn, melons, alfalfa were good. Father sold fat hogs in the fall. But disaster came upon us. The flood in the winter of 1889 destroyed the barn, our buildings, cow, hogs, chickens and one horse. So the family moved to a house on the Roy place when the flood had gone away.
7. In spring of 1889 father went to Gardiner, near the coast and got work on construction of the Life Saving Station at Entrance to Umpqua River.
8. He moved the family to Gardiner in 1890 where he had leased the only Hotel. We were comfortably located here. I went to school. We had one or two chambermaids. Mother did the cooking. I washed the dishes. It was during this year that mother bought the organ. Here we were prospering.
9. In the winter of 1893 we moved to Drain where a State Normal School was located. Father leased the hotel. But the 1893 depression ruined the hotel business. Father lost what he had saved in Gardiner. Now we were out of luck again. Mother refused to move again. Education for the children was here in Drain.
10. Now the folks were broke again. They rented a large house and roomed and boarded Normal School Students. Mother continued this means of supporting the family for many years. There was no work for men in Drain so, in 1895, father got work on the Great Northern Construction railroad crew on the Columbis. From this time until his death he infrequently returned to Drain. He sent mother money from time to time. Among his belongings were found payments to mining prospectors -- oil stock, land investments, etc. None were ever worth a dollar, so he went on always hoping to get ahead. He died at Willepa, Washington, leaving an estate of $ 3,000.00 in land and blacksmith shop. Father never mistreated his children. He did not drink or smoke. His children never knew him very well.

Mother was a grand person. She stood by her children and scarified for them. She was patient, kind and cheerful. Her disappointments, heartaches, regrets and sorrow she kept to herself. We all loved mother. She never failed us. She was a Christian, devoted to her family. There was never a divorce. None of her children ever went wrong. We all live proud of our wonderful mother.

If some member of the Buttery family is keeping a record of this wonderful family perhaps this letter should be sent to him for it gives an outline of the Annie Eliza Buttery. I wrote my autobiography which is in the keeping of our daughter, Mrs. Mona Marsh, 620 Santa Clara Avenue, Alameas, California. Sorry I have scribed too much.
